Dr. A. Merthan Dundar is working as an Assoc. Prof. Dr. at Ankara University, Faculty of Language and History-Geography, Japanese Language and Literature Department.

Japan and Islam Between Two World Wars

Faculty of Asian and Middle Eastern Studies
May 5th, 2014
17:00, Rooms 8/9

Dr. A. Merthan Dundar is working as an Assoc. Prof. Dr. at Ankara University, Faculty of Language and History-Geography, Japanese Language and Literature Department. He visited University of Tokyo between 2001-2002 as a research fellow of Japan Foundation. He participated research project (Modern Japanese Policy for Islamic World in the Showa Period and its Effects on the Asian Nationalism.) at Keio University between 2003-2004. Dr. Dundar made research on Japanese Central Asia policies at Stanford University as a Hoover Institution Fellow for three months in 2012-2013. He is member of research projects in Waseda University and Toyo University. His research interests are: History of Japanese-Islamic/Turkic World-Relations, Japanese Panasianism and Panislamism Policies through Central Asia and Middle East, History of Turkic- Russian Muslims in Japan

Funding for the Japan seminars in the series has been generously provided by the

Great Britain Sasakawa Foundation

For further information contact: Dr John Swenson-Wright
Senior Lecturer in Japanese Politics and International Relations
Faculty of Asian & Middle Eastern Studies, Sidgwick Avenue Cambridge, CB3 9DA (UK), Email: jhs22@cam.ac.uk